

AN UNHOLY ALLIANCE REJECTED.

True to his socialist the Lieutenants Governor appeared yesterday on the scene and turned the East Side topsy-turvy by the unwonted honor conferred on the Seventeenth ward. For nearly an hour the two distinguished citizens conferred on socialism and its future in these United States. Mr. Dorzheimer did not appear very well posted on the subject, and after the first formalities of the meeting were over he addressed himself to obtaining from Mr. Schwab an authoritative statement of the views and plans of the socialist leaders. He told Schwab that he had always been the friend of

BRIDGEVILLE, Ont., June 9, 1878.

The express train from Montreal ran into a special engine this morning. The dremen of the latter was injured. Both engines were badly smashed. The baggage and express cars were thrown down a bank.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

CORNING, N. Y., June 8, 1878.

Considerable excitement prevails here over the mysterious disappearance of John Starnes, a well-to-do farmer of Natick, Pa., aged 35 or three years. Mr. Starnes returned from the Watkins regatta on the night of May 29 and parted with his neighbors here, saying that he would go home in the morning. Since then nothing has been heard of him and foulplay is feared. A search is in progress.

"Yes, sir." (Reddening with mortification and anger.)

THE CADET AT PLAY.

But this kind of slang, aired chiefly on the above occasion for the writer's amusement, is only indulged in by the cadets among themselves. The bearing, manners and language of these young gentlemen among their superiors and in general society are as nearly faultless as those of any set of students in the world. No one who comes to West Point fails to droughts receded from 171 to the present are closely related to the minima of the sun's spots. As noticed in my last, society in the droughty region is greatly demoralized, robbery and even murder being rife. A telegram from Pernambuco advises that on the 10th inst. a band of eighty salteadores attacked and sacked the village of Alagoa Secca, in the Province of Pernambuco, and were threatening other places. In con-

age of war. This was an unlooked-for dilemma, and Captain Copeland had no possible means of escape except by the grace of his captors. They did not detain him a prisoner long, however, as they put him ashore at the next landing, foot of Broome street, when the Schuyler continued on her way to Bridgeport.

the officer was conveying his prisoner to the station house he was assaulted by a party of ruffians, who threw stones at him. He was struck on the head with one of the missiles and knocked down. Dwyer joined in the assault and kicked the officer in the abdomen, injuring him severely. Gahan called for assistance, which promptly arrived, and Dwyer was captured as he was running away. The prisoner was taken to the East Eighty-eighth street station house, where he was locked up. His confederates escaped before reinforcements arrived.
